ABOUT THE EVENT

Market makers have long been in the vanguard of stablecoin adoption, using digital dollars for trading capital, counterparty settlement, and base currency to rapidly move in and out of positions. Today, market makers are also using stablecoins, like USD Coin (USDC), to tap into new revenue opportunities, including yield farming, liquidity mining, and Cefi/DeFi lending markets. This webinar will feature a dialog with Circle CEO Jeremy Allaire and Nathaniel Whittemore that examines these trends against the backdrop of global macro realities that have accelerated growth in dollar-backed stablecoins. Mr. Allaire will illustrate how the Circle Business Account and platform APIs have emerged as a homebase for market makers who want to convert, trade, and custody USDC. Information will be shared on a new program and offering from Circle aimed at market makers building and growing value with USDC markets.

The screenshot shows a CoinDesk article page. At the top, there's a navigation bar with 'NEWS', 'LEARN', 'TV', 'VIDEOS', 'PODCASTS', 'RESEARCH', and 'EVENTS'. Below that, a row of cryptocurrency prices is displayed: Bitcoin 24h ($12,381.77 +4.02%), Ethereum 24h ($1,828.79 +3.22%), XRP 24h ($0.562108 +1.30%), Stellar 24h ($0.501982 +3.71%), and Chainlink 24h ($22.23 +3.11%). The article title is 'How Institutional Bitcoin Became Real' by Jan 18, 2021 at 17:42. It is sponsored by CME Group. The article text discusses the institutionalization of Bitcoin, mentioning the CME Group's role in launching Bitcoin futures in December 2017. A line chart titled 'CME Bitcoin Futures Open Interest (Million Contracts)' is shown, illustrating the growth of open interest over time. The article also includes quotes from Tim McCourt, CME Group's head of derivatives, and discusses the challenges and opportunities of institutional Bitcoin.
